AMPS-CV Workbench:

Takom US M103A2 in 1:35 scale

by Mike Petty

"I need to do a bit of cleanup and finish the weathering so I can get this project off the bench. Glen did a great review of the M103A1 kit. For the most part the M103A2 builds much the same. There are a couple of difference in the kits. First, TAKOM did a good job of replicating the T107 track used on the M103A2. This is different track than on the M0103A1. They also did a very good job on replicating the M60 like engine deck and rear grill doors. Like with many kits there are a couple of areas which causes you to scratch your head. These are the lack of a power cable of the search light. I used .030" lead wire. And, they included a very nice aluminum barrel, but it doesn't work with the canvas mantlet cover. Not sure what they were thinking."

Mike's in-box review is on AMPS-Armor.org

Academy German Panzer IV Ausf.H in 1:35 scale by Glen Martin

Fit and detail is very good. Glen said the only filler needed was underneath the track fenders. The hull Schürzen fit perfectly, but the turret brackets needed lots of manipulation to get them correct.

Glen's in-box review can be read on the AMPS website.

Asuka US M4A1 Sherman in 1:35 scale by Frank Blanton

This build was started years ago. Frank sprayed dark shading at the color boundaries but thinks it might need toning down. The tracks are individual link upgrades from AFV Club. The turret star is a decal but the remaining markings are from using stencils. The stowage are miscellaneous pieces from the spares box.

Asuka US M4A1 Sherman in 1:35 scale by Frank Blanton

The front lights have MV Product lens upgrades and the tow cable is made from twisted wire. Light socket caps were added to the brush guards. The tracks are one-piece soft styrene versions from the kit.

Here's a link to a scale model podcast from Australia, On The Bench. David Vickers is interviewed regarding the AMPS judging criteria. Give it a listen while at your Bench. --Frank Blanton otbmodellerspodcast.libsyn.com

Tamiya British Valentine Mk.II/IV in 1:35 scale by Frank Blanton

The tow cable ends are from the spares box and the cable is twisted wire. The exhaust is a metal part from a forgotten manufacturer (Moskit?). The front lights were wired. Mission Model paints were used for the Caunter camouflage, although Frank thinks the colors were a bit too blue and used a green filter to shift the hue. Tamiya tape was used to mask and spray the scheme. Tamiya Panel Line Accent Color was applied for dark shadows and the kit decals were used.

Academy Soviet T-34 in 1:35 scale by Craig Ashby

The kit's turret hand holds were replaced with new ones made from styrene rod and strip. A new roof line weld was made from putty. The track cleat strap rings were replaced with wire. The kit's casting texture was a bit overdone, so Craig knocked it back by sanding. The tracks and wheels were assembled as one piece, allowing the whole unit to be removed and painted.

Takom US M247 Sgt. York in 1:35 scale by Scott Bregi

The model is ready for paint. The kit tracks were installed but were very fiddly. Many weld lines were added with Slater's .010" rod. Photo-etched brass tie down loops on the turret stowage rack were separate and had to be carefully measured out and installed. The antenna bases are 3D printed upgrades. The phone box conduit was added with wire.

Pass and Review from August

Dragon German Tiger I (late) in 1:35 scale by Scott Holtz

The kit has Zimmerit molded into the parts. Scott has built this straight from the box. The kit decals were applied with Tamiya Mark Fit Strong solution, which allowed the decals to settle perfectly into the Zimmerit.

Miniart US M3 Lee Mid Production in 1:35 scale by Tom Jett

Tom wanted to build a mid-production Lee before a kit was available, so it was assembled from parts from early and late production kits. There are many parts many small and fiddly - that require lots of work cleaning, building and painting. Initial painting is done and weathering has begun but there's much more left. The marking were painted on.
